Exercise 7: CSS - A little skin on the skeleton

NOTE - The result of the exercise must be shown to teachers and approved before it can be considered completed.

In the previous task, you created an HTML skeleton that perhaps did not look very nice or stately. Today you will use CSS to style the skeleton so that it looks more like a website someone would want to visit - but don't be disappointed if it doesn't look fantastic. It is still a very simple site. Use the skills you learned through the video material to correct the appearance.

The following requests are available:
• Text and video content must be centered •
Front and background color must be relevant to the film (Check posters) •
The link list must be horizontal • The footer must be 50px high and have a different background color than the rest of the page.

Feel free to take this opportunity to experiment a bit with the CSS. The requirements are a minimum, not a maximum. Try to make the page look pleasant.
